Applying Human Centered Design

HUMAN CENTERED DESIGN

HUMAN CENTERED DESIGN

- A creative approach to problem solving.
- Build empathy with the people you're designing for.
- Source problems rather than seek solutions

What we heard...

Reset my password

I try to reset passwords as quickly as possible because generally when [users] are requesting this password change they are sitting at their computers waiting for MSIX, they have an immediate need and I don't want to hold them up.

Search Record(s)

I need to look up student records on the phone. The other day, I was doing a COE on a returning student and he couldn't remember the town he was born in, so I was trying to find out though MSIX what we had put down.

Save the record

Re-interviewing is part of the quality assurance process. Our recruiters love to get more students, but sometimes they are in a hurry and work too quickly and an error might have gotten into the system. So we go back with about 75 kids every year and re-interview. We reintroduce ourselves to the family and basically tell them we're checking not on them but on our ability to correctly get their data.

I have families I work with regularly and I need to be able to quickly find them, especially when I've just arrived at that family's house.

Move Notice

“ I seem to notice that Location A seems not be aware that the student has departed and they have not indicated in their enrollment records that the student has departed or withdrew from their district.

If someone is out there working with a family and they mention they are moving tomorrow, they can come back and do it at their computer or if they have a smartphone they might decide to log on and send it now.

Data Request

“ I did not hear back from the data specialist so I am assuming it was resolved.

We want to be better at being diligent in sending notifications, diligent in making ourselves available to answer follow up questions.

Flag for merge

“ In terms of worklist items and mergers, we haven't really run into issues with that. I don't necessarily deal with that on a day to day basis. The feedback I hear from data specialists is that they usually receive feedback or can figure it out themselves. I have not heard a lot of complaints.

How we answered...

Improve the user experience of our platform

We wanted to build a product that was accessible anytime and anywhere. Our solution also provided the opportunity for the actual site to adapt to change—new needs, regulations users, etc. We designed it to be flexible, so we can continue our conversations with you all, gather more feedback, solve different problems and design new solutions.

Refocus our identity to highlight people

Through a brand refresh, we were reminded that this program is about people. It's about you all in the field, migrant families and students. The MSIX visual identity is a representation of the program's unique mission and on-the-ground work force. The visual identity will be dynamic and confident while grounded and relevant to its audience. It will have clean & crisp aesthetics balanced with modern tones.

Forming design tenets

People First

Valuing the user needs over technical parameters.

Mobile First

Mobile first – Keeping in mind when, where and how users need access to information.

Delivery First

By providing a solid foundation for constant improvement, we will remain open to feedback, flexible for change.

Defining a New Identity

Brand Exercises

Our team participated in Branding Workshops to:

- Evaluate desired brand characteristics
- Explore preferred aesthetics
- Begin to define the visual identity

Mood Boarding

We explored visual metaphors to define an aesthetic direction.

Brand Presentations

Armed with a clear direction for our brand, we were able to make thoughtful decisions on the multiple directions we were presented.

Our Brand Mantra

The MSIX visual identity is a representation of the program's unique mission and on-the-ground work force. The visual identity will be dynamic and confident while grounded and relevant to its audience. It will have clean & crisp aesthetics balanced with modern tones.

While keeping the Department of Education and it's Migrant Education program in mind, MSIX will feel modern and strong, bringing a fresh yet familiar appeal to its core color palette.

Defining a New Identity

A photograph of a cornfield at sunset. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a strong lens flare effect with rays of light extending across the sky. The corn plants in the foreground are dark green and silhouetted against the bright light. The sky is a mix of orange, yellow, and blue. The text "Show & Tell" is written in white, bold, sans-serif font in the center of the image.

How Mari Works

Mobile

Mari's work phone helps her keep in touch on the go, though she desires a more mobile friendly interface that would allow her to easily navigate the site while in the field and send time-sensitive notifications to regional and state offices.

Desktop

When he's back in the office, Jason uses his laptop to input student information into the system based on his notes from the field. In addition, he sends out move notifications when applicable.

A close-up, slightly blurred photograph of a person's hands typing on a laptop keyboard. The person is wearing a light-colored sweater and a thin bracelet. In the foreground, there is a stack of papers and a smartphone lying flat. The background is dark and out of focus, showing what appears to be a desk or office environment. The overall lighting is soft and focused on the hands and the laptop.

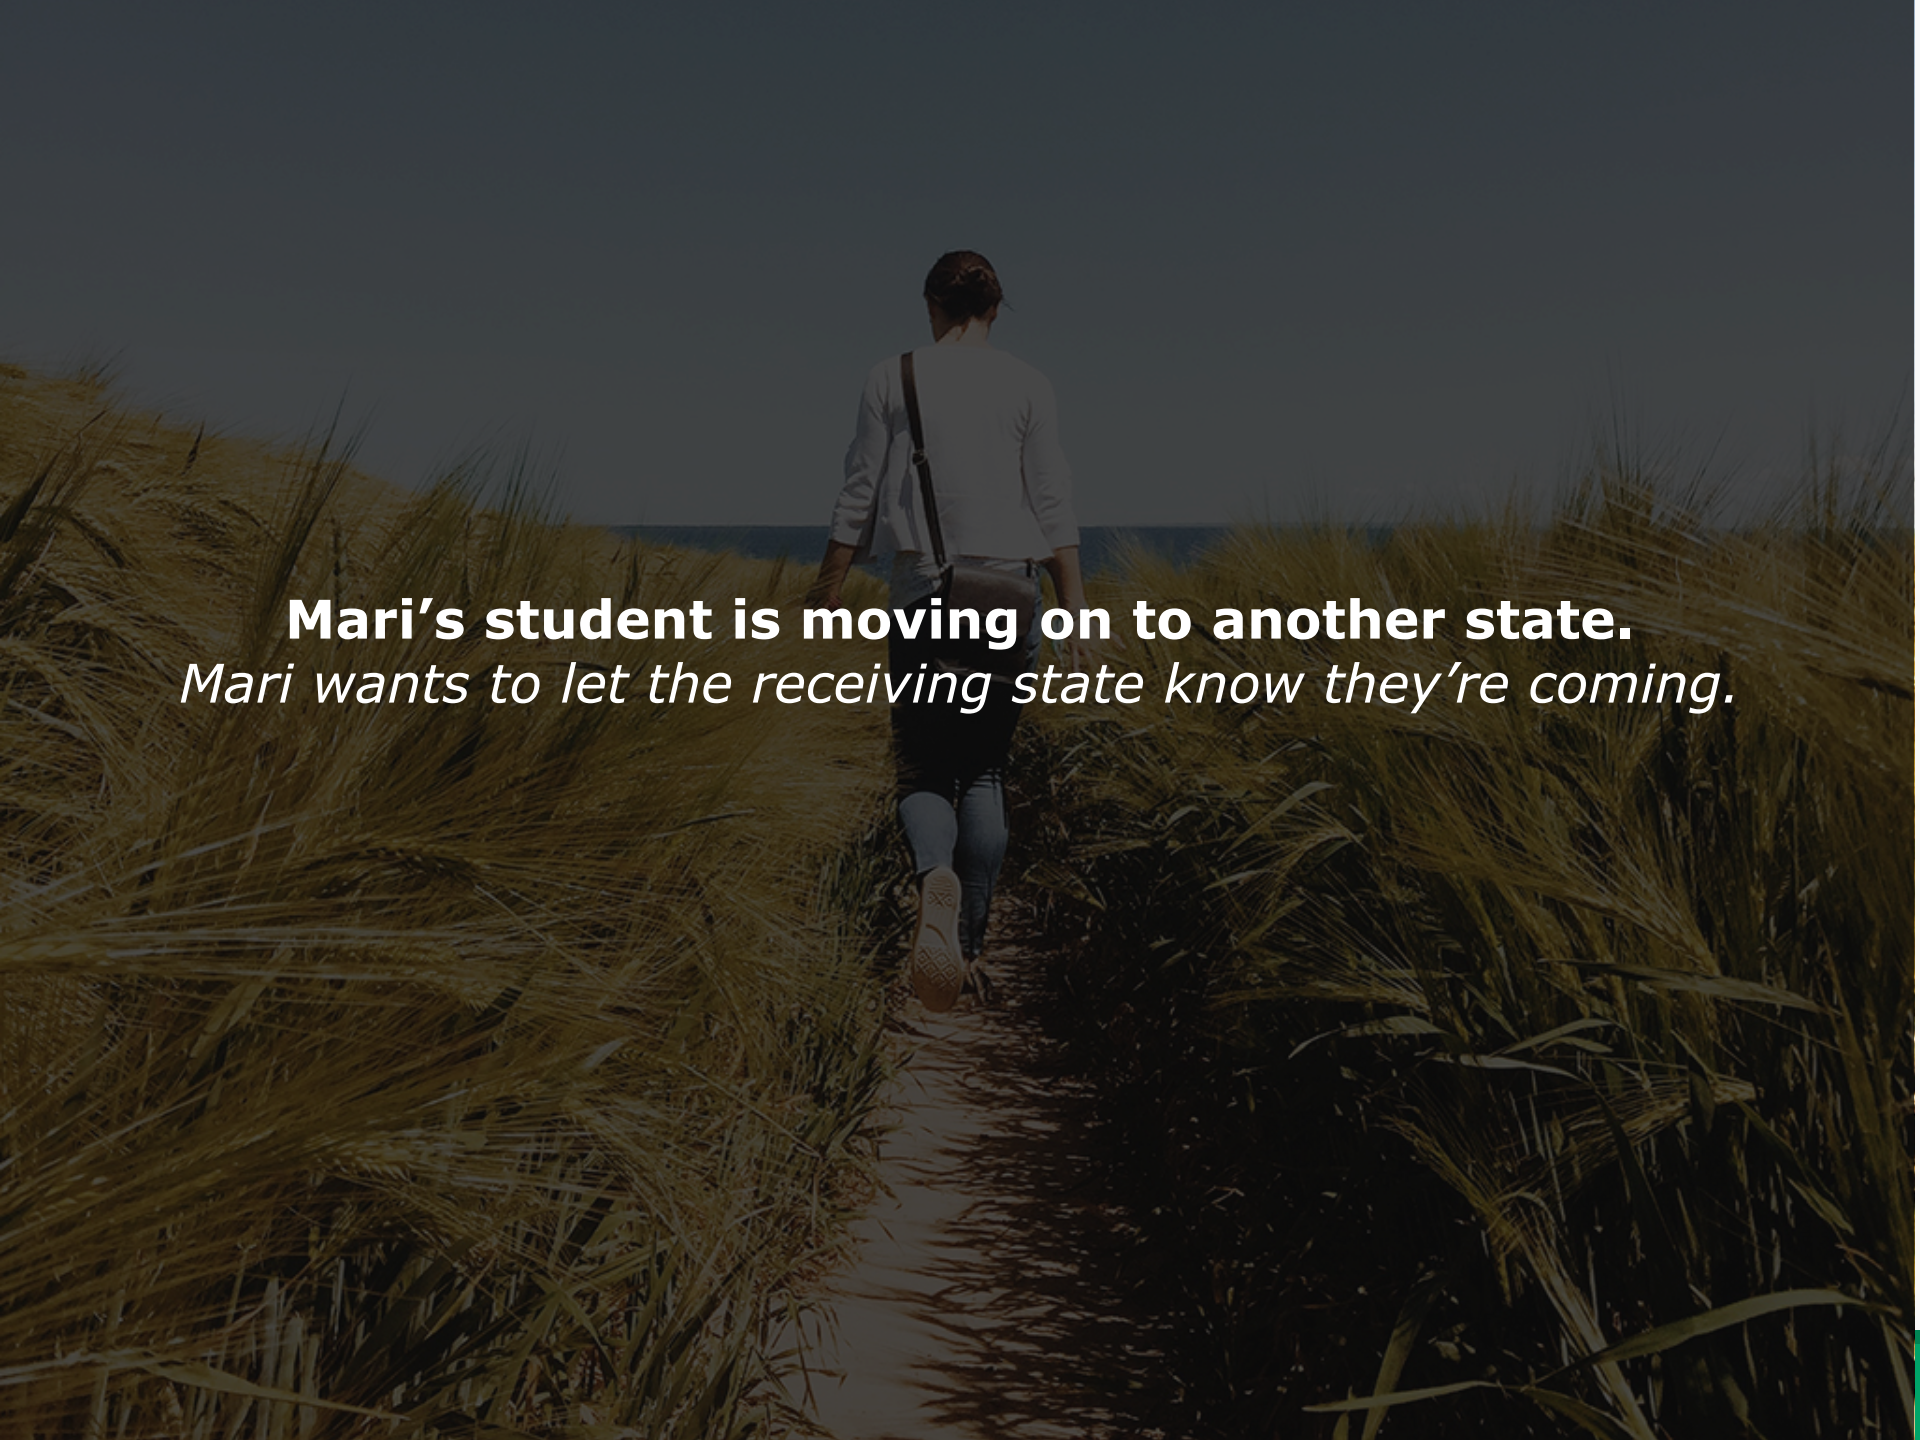

When reviewing the record,
Mari identifies an opportunity to improve data quality

A detailed map of Mexico is shown, with a dark, semi-transparent overlay covering the entire image. The map displays various geographical features, including state boundaries, major cities, and bodies of water. The text is centered over the map.

There seems to be some missing information,
Mari wants to request data from another state.

A person with their back to the camera is walking away on a narrow, sandy path that cuts through tall, golden-brown grass. The person is wearing a light-colored long-sleeved shirt, dark pants, and sneakers, and has a bag slung over their shoulder. In the distance, the path leads to a calm blue ocean under a clear sky. The entire image has a dark, semi-transparent overlay.

Mari wants to let the receiving state know they're coming.
